OBSERVATIONS

Night air has several sorts of poison in it.

Falling in love is easy—falling out is misery.

A kind word for every hour is a good strike.

Carrying favor is high-class hollering—let's hit.

A noble deed (when unselfishly done) is its own reward.

The "equity" is the compressed lead of journalistic battle.

Honesty is as much of a necessity as it is old fashioned.

Romantic speech often attracts attention—and decent friends.

Politeness should be entered in every instrument of business life.

The kind word (truthful opinion) is a deposit in the bank of cheerfulness.

No man whisks ever wins him a permanent place in the hall of fame.

The taurine person is a curiosity—and is to be pitied rather than envied.

If the man in the moon has a powerful telescope, he should be able to see a good deal.

It is no trouble for some men to put business before pleasure, business before pleasure, to them.

You had better be exceedingly sure of about getting the fellow who gives all this a fight.

It is also the birdhead appetites which keeps many of them from running away from home.

And sometimes a man marries a partner and finds she also a deposit of some sort all right.

Friendship is less important than the walk and sit, and that may not amount to a great deal.

Try to be as careful of your health as anyone of your number. If you want the money to help you.

The only who goes straight ahead and never takes up his partner gets somewhere sooner or later.

All I want in the world is a bit to eat and a place to sleep," said a tramp at police headquarters.

An Adinko man who eats too much and knows it says: "The day goes my grave with my teeth."

We are too free to criticize others should be charitable showing mercy rather than applying judgment.

An Adinko says it won't profit me as much as a desire to leave the farm, that caused him to go to war.

This is the familiar way: "Well, dears, I have something to tell you tomorrow." Then tomorrow comes and she says: "Sorry, but I have changed my mind, and I won't tell it today."

Joe Schott: "According to The Patriotic, England plans to blow up an American ship bound for an English port. The English will then blame it on the Germans with the hope of drawing the United States in. In the past 4 years there have been about 1,000 arrests for drunkenness."

The Preserving Plant DIDN'T MAKE MONEY

W. H. Martin submitted for 8 shares in the Jones Rock Preserving plant, the shares being $100 each. One share was taken outright, and the other 8 shares taken conditionally, and Mr. Martin gave his note for $500, which were immediately discounted like all the other notes taken on subscription to the preserving plant. The Dole-Lemon Bank being purchaser. Mr. Martin paid the $100 subscribed conditionally, and the bank has brought suit to enforce the collection of the $400 left to Mr. Martin to account on the banks statement as an honor purchase. Mr. Martin said he expected he would have to pay it, but would fight the suit for delay to hope that Jones Rock might be found and service acquiredights than would be worth while to sustain their contention with the proceedings.

ABOUT BILL-HALL, DR. SHEEK'S BOSOM FRIEND

"My old friend, Bill Hall, animalizer at Lancaster, Mo., can write a check for a million dollars now," said Dr. H. M. Sheek. "My friend Bill is a clever one, like Missouri."

There is something to the doctors statement that Bill Hall is some man A Kansas City newspaper man, who had to fill some space, recently wrote the following story about Bill Hall:

"It, while you were coming home some night to Lancaster, Mo., you were to suddenly encounter a Bon or a camel or an elephant in the public square, you wouldn't need to be afraid to tell your wife about it. It wouldn't mean that you were in the early stages of delirium tremens, or that grim madness leered at you out of the dusk, for, not at all. Instead, you would say to yourself in a bored and blasé way: 'Some of Billy Hall's critters loose again.'

For to the inhabitants of this little Missouri town of 1,000 denizens of the African jungles and savannas from far-off India are twice-fold tales, grown all familiar since the day eleven years ago when "Billy" Hall, horse trader, bought a second-hand circus in Evansville, Ind., and shipped it home to Lancaster. Elephants are familiar apparitions around Lancaster.

For Hall has been buying circus ever since that time, and the small boys of Lancaster live in an earthly paradise as a result. Imagine a man who keeps elephants in his back yard, and will lend you a Rhinoceros pugilist as soon as another man who is continually on the lookout for small boys to run around, whose pockets flow with an unending stream of quarters. What would you ask? It is hard to move anywhere around town without encountering some of the picturesque possessions of Billy Hall—his real name is William F., but nobody ever thinks of using that. Plodding along down the little single railroad track that leads to Lancaster, you are at once aware that here is a country town entirely different. For buildings are thick with circus cars in gold and scarlet, and here is a hand wagon being refurbished for spring use, and a calliope putting on summer clothes and down the road passes a couple of horses with women riders—and you know from the way the horses lift their feet that they are bred to the sawdust as other the smiling ladies in their riding habits are really glittering queens of fairland, who have chosen for the moment to lay aside the glitter and ride along country roads like ordinary folks.
